About the Workshop

With the exception of a few, all economies have recovered to conditions that are similar to those prior to COVID. Despite difficult global circumstances and rising inflation across the globe, with the United States experiencing the greatest inflation in the past 40 years, the capital markets in India appear to be positive at the moment. Given the integration of the global markets, the exodus of foreign portfolio investors from Indian markets in anticipation of a U.S. interest rate hike is expected to have an impact on the Indian capital markets. The macroeconomic conditions and the operation of the financial markets are expected to be impacted by the uncertainties surrounding the world events.

The country's infrastructure is being developed with a lot of momentum, which is anticipated to support future growth towards a $5 trillion economy. Despite all the global concerns, the Indian stock market is worth nearly twice as much as China's. The RBI's choice of key policy rates and the outlook for the global economy will determine whether or not the positive trend is temporary. The conference offers a forum for an open discussion of the aforementioned.
