About the Seminar

Women empowerment is essential for development of any society but the ground realities relating to women in India are difficult to comprehend. The fundamental rights of women, most often were deprived by men and this denial is justified often in the name of tradition. In rural/urban slum areas, women are generally relegated mainly to household duties and cheap labour. They are not perceived as substantial income generating source. Without the power to work and earn a good income, their voices are silenced, as they are economically dependent and have no capacity to work and earn to live independently.

In this milieu, financial inclusion is the main way for women to acquire the power to think and act freely, exercises choice and fulfil their potential as full and equal member of the society caused by it is the method of offering banking and financial solutions and services to every individual in the society without any form of discrimination.

Against this backdrop, the seminar will act as a national platform to discuss financial inclusion challenges for women empowerment, identify innovative solutions and share experiences among the representatives across all participants covering both demand and supply side issues.
